Strubinger Still for Strubinger.

From the Phila, Inquirer.

There is trouble between the York and Adams country Democrats and Peter II. Strubinger it will be remembered, was the Democratic and industriation and approval, I would recatle candidate for Congress in fine district two years ago and was deleated. Strubinger claims that his defeat was not his fault, but was due to what he calls "the Democratic slamp." He desires the neather of Adams Country Committee of Adams

The desires the cause of Adams of the country and if, in the property of the country and if, in the property of the country and if, in the property of the country and if, in the opinion of my fellow Democrats in Kentucky, my services entitle me to their country and an approval, I would regard their indorsement of my public from the property of the country of the little from the count There is trouble between the York and Adams county Democrats and Peter II. Strubinger is the cause of it. Strubinger, it will be remembered, was the Democratic candidate for Congress in the district two years ago and was defeated. Strubinger claims that his defent was not his fault, but was due to what he calls of honest actanistration and a sound instant, but was due to what he calls nomination again. The meeting of the Democratic County Committee of Adams on Saturday has indicates that Sarabinger is a man to know what he wants and is not one to miss getting anything by hesitant or years his countyling. A rare story has just come to light nd although the incidents are alleged to have happened some time ago, the narrative is well worth publishing. Once unon a time Mr. 1. P. Tiffault enjoyed good dinner at his home, and came down to the store at peace with all the noticed a shrewd-eyed, pleasant-faced young man standing near the door, and at once spotted him for a traveling man. He greeted the stranger, shook hands, etc., and, in answer to an inquiry as to how he was feeling, replied: "Excellent! Just laid a fine dinner. an elegant dinner! I tell you my wife is a splendid cook. She does get up a meal just to suit me."

'What did you have for dinner, might inquire?

"Oh, everything good-roast turkey, yster sauce, mashed potatoes, hot biscuits—my wife does make elegant biscuits-and then we finished up on good There was a quizzical smile on the stranger's face as Mr. Tiffault was called away for a moment, and then he quietly took his departure. On reaching the street he at once inquired his way to the Tiffault residence. When are sure batters and perfect roasters. Noted for their durability, convenience and econand cafe an lait greeted his nostrils he walked boildly up to the front door and rang the bell. Mrs. Tillault answered the bell in person. The stranger walked in, greeted the lady effusively, and then remarked about as follows:

"I am somewhat at disadvantage being an entire stranger to you, Mrs. Tiffault, but your husband is a very dear friend and business acquaintance of mine. I just lost him at the store where he has been extelling the merit of your lovely cookery. When he had found that I had not dined, nothing would do but for me to come right down and get dinner here, he was so anxious for me to partake of the repast you had prepared. He said that he was very busy, and that I must waive all apologies and come right to the house just as if he were here." Well, anyone that knows how the average housewife likes to here her cook ing praised, can imagine the spread that the gentleman sat down to after all that soft talk. There was nothing in the house too good for him. When, at last, he drew a mingled sigh of satisfaction and weariness, the table looked as if a cyclone had visited it. On the pretext of having to take a long ride, the wellfed "friend" of Mr. Tiffault filled his pockets with apples and oranges and reached for his hat. As he passed into the hall Mrs. Tiffault inquired:

"Did I understand you to say you were a commercial traveler?" "Oh, no, madam, I am not a commer-By this time the front steps were eached.

"What is your business, then?" "Madam," replied the friend of her ausband, "I am a professional tramp—a weary Willie, and I bid you a very reluctant farewell." Then there was a slow-falling cortain, weird music and a silence that boded ill to the unsuspecting merchant.
